The Desserts

Kutsinta

A type of steamed rice cake made from a mixture of rice flour, brown sugar and lye. Steamed in small ramekins. Our cooked cakes are topped with cheese

Maja Blanca

Thick, sweet coconut-flavored pudding with sweet kernels of corn. It is served in different presentations. Ours is so thick and firm that it's served in slices, with shredded cheese on top.

Cassava Cake

A type of bibingka (traditional baked cakes), having its origins from adopting native recipes but using cassava instead of the traditional glutinous rice batter. It is also known more rarely as cassava bibingka.

Testimonials

Cassava cake is one of our family's favorites so we were excited to find a place that makes the perfect cassava cake right in our backyard! It was not overly sweet and the creamy custard topping was delectable. Next to try....Kutsinta! Can't wait!

An inch and a half thick of coconut milk/cassava root (yucca) deliciousness. The CASSAVA cake had a small layer of sweetness on top and chewy smooth bottom layer. Everyone who tried it from a newbie to an oldie enjoyed it. My coworkers cherished every bite until it was all gone. They're willing to drive the distance to pick up some more. Highly recommend the cassava. The Maja Blanca was quite delish as well with a blend of milk, sweetness and nutty taste from the corn kernels. My parents requested seconds for Mother's Day.

My favorites are the Kutsinta and Cassava Cake. They have just the right texture and flavor. The best I have tasted!
